Caribbean Spearfishing Conditions

Around Anguilla, visibility in the 60–100 foot range is common in open water. Reef structure holds snapper, grouper, hogfish, and triggerfish. Bluewater encounters with kingfish and wahoo passing through are possible. Always verify regulations with the Anguilla Department of Fisheries before diving.

Choosing the Right Gun

- 75–90cm: Tight reef, beginners, shallow breath-hold dives
  - 100–110cm: Mid-range all-rounder for clear Caribbean water
  - 130cm: Open water, bluewater encounters, advanced divers

Recommended Spearguns

Speargun	Length	Best For	Price Range
Rob Allen Tuna	130cm	Reef + bluewater	$280–$380
Cressi Apache	75cm	Tight reef / beginner	$90–$140
Mares Cyrano 1.1	110cm	Mid-range all-rounder	$180–$240
JBL Woody Magnum	122cm	Budget open water	$120–$170
Riffe Euro	130cm	Advanced bluewater	$320–$420

---

Complete Dive Setup

- Wetsuit: 1.5–3mm for UV/abrasion protection in Caribbean waters
  - Mask: Low-volume freediving for better equalization at depth
  - Fins: Long-blade freediving fins — efficiency matters on breath-hold
  - Knife: Non-negotiable safety equipment — accessible from either hand
  - Float + floatline: Required for bluewater diving and larger targets

Legal Requirements

Spearfishing is regulated in all Caribbean territories. Verify: permitted species, minimum sizes, prohibited zones (marine parks), and any seasonal restrictions. Non-compliance carries real penalties including equipment confiscation.

Final Recommendation

For most Caribbean reef divers: Mares Cyrano 1.1 110cm is the best all-round choice. Starting out: Cressi Apache 75cm. Reef and bluewater combined: Rob Allen Tuna 130cm.
